AN OLD PILE IN THE SANCTUM.

[Brooklyn Eagle.]

"I want to call your attention to our cystem a dress reform, commeaced an ancient dame with a wide mouth, as she entered the managing editor's sanctum, and threw her hat on the table.

"Looks very pretty," murmured the managing editor, surveying the Bloomer costume with a critical eye.

"See how free and easy everything " continued the woman, brandishing her arms and skipping around. "Did you ever see anything equal to that?"

"Don't think I ever did," replied the managing editor calmly. "I'm prepared to say that I never seen anything anywhere that bore any resemblance to it." "Comfortable, pretty, accommodating all the limbs and giving free play to all the muscles. Notice that?" "Don't really see anything else," clamoured the admiring editor. "That element seems to be the mainstay of the "Now I want this paper to pick this scheme up and make it popular among the ladies of the nation. Are you prepared to go into that branch of philanthropy ?" "It's a little out of the line of my duties," responded the managing editor. "I'll call in the religious editor. He knows all about such things."

"I see, I see," muttered the religious editor, as he took the show in at a glance. "You keep those pantaloons up with suspenders, I reckon ?"

"That's just it," replied the delighted reformer. "That is where the costume approaches that of a man, and therefore is perfectly comfortable." "Suppose you bust a suspender, what do you propose to do about that?" asked the religious editor delicately. "Sew it up," replied the woman promptly. · But suppose you're on a picnic and there is no needle bandy !"

"I don't know," murmured the woman meditatively.

"Tell me frankly," demanded the religious editor sternly, "do you know how to fasten a suspender with a stick " "No, I don't," retorted the woman.

"Have you ever seen a woman who

"I don't believe I ever have," returned the reformer. "I supposed so," commented the religious editor. "I thought so. Now, another thing. Do you know how to tie s button on with a string ?" "I have never tried to " stammered the woman.

"I wouldn't have believed you if you said you had," continued the religious editor. "You begin to see where your dress reform will come out in case of accident. But there is something else. You have suspenders for your pants and another pair for your socks. Now suppose you were dressing in a hurry and those suspenders got mixed, and you put an original work, which would belong the pair for the socks on the pants and the pants pair on the socks. And suppose you hoisted the socks up to the collar bone and you found your pants were beginning to slip-"

"You're a brute!" howled the woman, as she made a break for the door.

"That was rather tough, wasn't it?" asked the managing editor, regarding the disappearing figure with an emotion of relief.

"I don't know," replied the religious editor, looking longingly at the bottom drawer of the managing editor's desk. "Underdeath all her dress reform she was strapped up like a mule in a blacksmith shop, and I knew it. If she had not scattered on that last question she would on the next, so it was only a mat ter of time. How do you like that applejack I saw you tasting an hour

A South Carolina Baptist church contains in its old record the expulsion of a woman for "doing too much talking in the neighborhood."

A fruit jar—eat the early peach and you'll know what it is.

A South Carolina Baptist church self-made men are frauds. The drunk-ards and paupers are self-made men, who spurned the advice of friends. "The men who are successful and honored are the ones who have cherished a mother's love and teachings, and they are the making of good mothers."

PIOCHE, NEV., SATURDAY, AUGUST 18, 1883.

EGYPTIAN DISCOVERIES IN ROME

The Via di S. Ignazio is a short, narrow lane, which leads from the Collegio Romano to the tribune of S. Maria sopra Minerva, crossing a portion of the ground formerly occupied by the "Iseum et Serapeum" of the ninth region. Every time excavations have been made on either side of the lane, to build or restore the houses which line it, some beautiful specimens of Egyptian workmanship have been brought to light. Considering that no excavations had ever been made underneath the public ground, and considering there was no reason willy, in the very center of such promising land, other relies of the famous sanctuary should not exist, I asked the Archæological Municipal Commission to try the experiment, and my proposal was accepted at once. The works began on Monday, the 11th-hard and difficult works, because we had to dig to a depth of twenty feet between houses of a very doubtful solidity, propping everything on every side. First to appear, at the end of the third day, was a magnificent sphinx in black basalt, the portrait of King Amasis. It is a chef d'œuvre of the Saitic period, brought to perfection in the smallest details, and still more interesting for its historical connection with the conquest of Egypt by Cambyses. The cartouches bearing the King's name appear to have been hammered, although not so completely as to render it unin telligible. The nose, likewise, and the ureus, the symbol of royalty, were injured at the same time. The explanation of such circumstances is given by Herodotus. When Cambyses occupied Sais, Amasis had just been burned. The con-querer caused the body to be removed from the tomb, to be flogged and otherwise insulted, and finally to be burned the maximum of profanation from an Egyptian point of view. His name was erased from the monuments which bore it, a natural consequence of the "mem orize damnatio." This sphinx is the sur viving testimonial of that eventful catastrophe. When, six or seven centuries later, a Roman Governor of Egypt, or a Roman merchant from the same province, singled out this work of art to be shipped over to Rome as a votive offer to the Iseum Campense, ignorant of the historical value of its mutilations, he had the nose and ureus carefully restored. Now both are gone again; there is no danger of a second restoration. I may remark, sor, is erased from the obelisk of Minerva found in the same Iseum. In these two monuments we possess a synopsis of Egyptian history between 595 and 526

The second work, discovered on June

17th, is an obelisk of red granite, inscribed with hieroglyphics. The lower portions only appear on the side of the trench, and we are still anxious to ascertain whether it is broken or not. If the monolith is entire, it will be of the same size as the one in the Piazza della Ro-tonda. The cartouches show the names of Pamana II the Sespetrie of the Greeks

We thought at first that the obelisk, like that of the Pantheon, was a Roman imitation, but Professor Schiaparelli, the eminent Egyptologist, who came over from Florence at the first notice of these extraordinary findings, considers it to be
